

Principles of International Criminal Law

Third Edition

Gerhard Werle, Professor of International Criminal Law, Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, and Florian Jeßberger, Professor of Criminal Law, University of Hamburg

- Provides a comprehensive understanding of the foundations of international criminal law and the core crimes it governs
- Offers an accessible overview for both students, legal practitioners, and judges working on cases concerning crimes, both at the international and domestic levels
- Builds on the previous editions' philosophical and normative analysis of international criminal justice, and discusses new developments in the field, including recent case law from the International Criminal Court

This new edition revises and updates work with developments in international criminal justice since 2009. It includes new material on the principle of culpability as one of the fundamental principles of international criminal law, the notion of terrorism as a crime under international law, the concept of direct participation in hostilities, the problem of so-called unlawful combatants, and the issue of targeted killings. The book retains its highly-acclaimed systematic approach and consistent methodology, making the book essential reading for both students and scholars of international criminal law, as well as for practitioners and judges working in the field.

Readership: Students and scholars of international criminal law; practitioners, legal advisers, and judges in this field
